Spencer Boyce

Spencer Boyce was born June 3 1826 at Fort Ann, Stuben Co., New York and moved to Lyndon, Mich. with his parents when six years of age and has lived here ever since. Altho having been feeble for a long time his death came unexpectedly, last Monday evening Sept. 23, 1912.

He was married Nov. 1, 1854 to Mary Wallace with whom he lived nearly 28 years. To this union six children were born, four of whom survive him. Their oldest son, Loyal, died while attending school in Owosso and the youngest daughter, Sarah, died leaving a baby girl, Adorna, whom they have tenderly cared for. Ella, Samuel, and George have always lived near their parents and Abbie lives in Detroit. The sweetest character has been shown by their daughter, Ella and her husband who came from their home to care for them. He was a kind, indulgent husband and father and leaves to mourn his loss an aged wife, four children, sixteen grand children, three great grand children, one brother, two sisters, besides other relatives and a host of friends.

He had been a member of the Baptist church for twenty-two years and lived as well as professed his christianity. And as he often expressed it, "He was ready and waiting for the call of the Master."

The funeral services were held at the home last Thursday, Rev. G. E. McTaggart officiating.

Happenings That Are Making History—Information Gathered from All Quarters of the Globe and Given in a Few Lines.

Politics

Job E. Hedges of New York was nominated as Republican candidate for governor of New York at the state convention at Saratoga.

The Democratic national committee needs $750,000 to defray the expenses during the remainder of the campaign. Henry Morgenthau, chairman of the finance committee so declared in a formal statement issued at New York.

Connecticut Progressives nominated Henry Knox Smith for lieutenant governor. Mr. Smith resigned his office in Washington last July to cast his fortunes with the Progressive party.

Chin Shue, a Chinaman, has been nominated for representative in the Seventh ward of Boston by the Republicans. He is believed to be the first Celestial ever to be nominated for political office in the United States.

Washington

With General Luis Mena under arrest and guarded by American soldiers, 700 of his troops disarmed and helpless, and the remainder of the Nicaraguan rebel forces practically unable further to resist the government, state department officials at Washington are of the opinion that the rebellion in Nicaragua has come to a full stand.

Mrs. Kate Combs, who for the last thirty-five years has mended the sheets used to cover the money-making machines of the bureau of engraving and printing when they are not in operation, stowed all her vouchers in a trunk and never has made an effort to cash any of them. She may lose her money.

Enlistments in the navy through the recruiting service, for the week ended September 21, amounted to 308, the largest figure for any week since that of January 17, when 367 enlisted.

Domestic

Alcohol claims 66,000 victims in the United States each year. Of this number 20 per cent., or 13,200, are women. These figures were given by Dr. Edward Bunnell Phelps, editor of the American Underwriter, in an address before the international congress of hygiene and demography in session in Washington.

John Caskey, sixty years old, a hermit living in York county, Pennsylvania, murdered Frank Hendrix, forty-five years old, a wealthy farmer and his two sisters, Emma and Hester, fifty-two and fifty-five years of age, respectively. He then turned the weapon upon himself and sent a bullet through his head.

A force of 750 marines sailed from Philadelphia on the transport Prairie for Santo Domingo. They are sent as a precautionary measure to guard against attacks on the custom houses which the United States government, under the receivership, is bound to protect.

Edward L. Dwyer, millionaire speculator, soldier of fortune and pauper by turns, who made and lost a fortune in the Chicago wheat pit, was found dead, with a bullet through his head, in a yard near the railroad depot at Janesville, Wis. That the man had been murdered there was little doubt.

Three men were killed and four others were injured when the west part of the roof of the new five-story hotel building, the Alameda, in Kansas City, Mo., collapsed under the weight of 100 tons of cinders and crashed through all of the floors to the basement, carrying the workmen with it.

Protesting against the imprisonment of Joseph Ettore, Arturo Giovannitti and Antonia Caruso, 12,000 textile operatives struck at Lawrence, Mass., tying up the Ayer, Washington, Prospect and Wood mills of the American Woolen company.

The second annual national implement and vehicle show was opened at Peoria, Ill., and will continue for ten days. Danahy, Lillie, Miss Johnson and others will take part in the four days' aviation meet next week.

Charles W. McLaughlin of Portland, Ind., on behalf of himself and 188,000 other members of the Bankers' Life, association of Des Moines, Ia., has filed suit in the superior court at Indianapolis for an accounting. Judgment and immediate appointment of a receiver for the association and for the possession and control of $18,000,000 assets is asked.

A priest, a policeman and two sailors were injured in a battle with three hold-up men on the Hudson river water front, New York.

Personal

Gen. Daniel E. Sickles, whose wife raised $8,200 by pawning her jewels to prevent a sale of the general's household possessions under foreclosure, has issued a statement in which he makes a bitter attack upon his wife and their son, Stanton Sickles, and says Mrs. Sickles had enough money so that she did not need to pawn the jewels.

Rev. Father Edward McGonigal, rector of Epiphany Roman Catholic church, one of the most important in Pittsburgh, was removed to the Municipal hospital suffering from smallpox.

A seventh son of the seventh son was born to Mr. and Mrs. David Geiger of Pittsburgh. Mr. Geiger is a mail carrier.

Guglielmo Marconi, the discoverer of the wireless telegraphy, was badly injured in an automobile accident near Borgheto, Italy. The doctors attending him have indicated in bulletins that he probably will recover.

Fernando A. Carter, director of the Syracuse (N. Y.) Museum of Arts and one of the best known artists and critics in America, was struck by an automobile and probably fatally injured.

Joseph E. Widener, traction magnate, underwent a successful operation for appendicitis at his suburban residence near Philadelphia.

Mabel Hite, who was at death's door in June, is convalescing. The actress went to the New York Polo grounds to root for her husband, "Mike" Donlin, who is playing right field with the Pittsburgh baseball nine.

Sporting

The opening game of the world's baseball series will be held in New York on Tuesday, October 8. The games will alternate between New York and Boston, one game in each city, until the series is concluded.

In a signed statement issued by Charles W. Murphy, president of the Chicago baseball club of the National league, he almost openly charges that the failure of his team to win the pennant for the year of 1912 was due chiefly to overindulgence in strong drink by certain of his players.

The pacing stallions Gano and Minor Heir clipped half a second off the world team record when they stepped an exhibition mile at Recreation park, Kalamazoo, Mich., in 2:05 flat.

Foreign

Charles Voisin, the constructor of aeroplanes, was killed and Baroness de la Roche, the noted woman aviator, was seriously injured in an automobile accident at Lyons, France.

The question of freight rates in view of the opening of the Panama canal is under discussion at a secret conference in Berlin of representatives of German and British shipping lines engaged in South American traffic.

Cuban government has just paid its installment on the Havana sewer and paving contract, amounting to about $400,000. The government defaulted September 1 on this payment.

Twelve thousand of the twenty-two thousand railroad employes ordered to strike, quit work at Barcelona, Spain. As fast as they left their positions were taken by government soldiers.

Driven insane from fright by his first sight of an aeroplane in the sky, an Arab soldier in the Turkish camp near Zanzur oasis, attempted to kill Enver Bey, the Turkish commander-in-chief in Tripoli.

More than 200 mutinous soldiers were executed without the formality of a court-martial by the loyal troops commanded by General Li Yuan Heng in consequence of the outbreak among the soldiers encamped outside the walls of Wu Chung, China.

Guillermo Billinghurst, who was elected president of Peru in August, took the oath of office at Lima. He succeeds Augusto Leguia and his term extends to 1916.

The volcano Stromboli, in Italy, again is in eruption. Cinders, ashes and incandescent sand are being ejected from nine craters and dust is falling in quantities over the surrounding country and the outlying islands. Vineyards and crops generally are suffering heavily.

Protests against an English invasion of Tibet and against Russian revolutionary agitation in Mongolia were drafted by President Yuan Shi Kai and will be forwarded to London and St. Petersburg.

G. O. P. CONVENTION HELD IN DETROIT

SPRIT OF HARMONY PREVAILS AS STATE AND NATIONAL LEADERS ARE CHEERED.

JUSTICE KUHN WAS RE-NOMINATED WITHOUT OPPOSITION.

Close Vote for State Treasurer—Fredrick C. Martindale and Oramel B. Fuller to Appear on Ticket to Succeed Themselves.

Supreme Justice—Joseph H. Steere, of Sault Ste. Marie; Franz Kuhn, of Mt. Clemens.

State Secretary—Frederick C. Martindale, of Detroit.

State Treasurer—John W. Haarer, of Ann Arbor.

Auditor-General—Oramel B. Fuller, of Ford River.

Attorney-General—Grant Fellows, of Hudson.

Land Commissioner—Augustus C. Carton, of East Tawas.

The sprit of harmony and the good feeling that characterized the early part of the Republican state convention prevailed Tuesday while nominations were being made for places on the state ticket.

There were only three contests for secretary of state, auditor general and state treasurer, and they did not develop much, if any, ill-feeling.

Justice Kuhn was re-nominated without opposition, the rules being suspended and the secretary being instructed to cast the entire vote of the convention.

No Opposition to Steere.

Justice Joseph H. Steere, of the Soo, against whom there had been no opposition, was nominated in a similar manner to complete the term of the late Justice Frank A. Hooker, which expires Dec. 31, 1913.

The closest contest was that for state treasurer. There were three candidates—John W. Haarer, of Ann Arbor, who for several years has been deputy state treasurer; State Senator Albert C. Kingman, of Battle Creek, and State Senator John M. Perry, of Oscoda county. Haarer won on the first and only ballot, receiving 19 more votes than his two opponents. The ballot resulted: Haarer, 743; Kingman, 432; Perry, 292. Haarer's name was placed in nomination by Congressman W. W. Wedemeyer, of Ann Arbor. Former Congressman Washington Gardner performed a similar service for Senator Kingman, while a Mr. Wisner, named Senator Perry.

As generally expected, Oramel B. Fuller, of Ford River, who is now serving his second term, was easily re-nominated for auditor general. His name was presented by Congressman H. Olin Young, of Ishpeming, who stated that since his incumbency, Auditor General Fuller had greatly reduced expenses and had satisfactorily administered the business of the office.

Victor M. Gore, of Benton Harbor, named Dr. Arthur W. Seidmore, of Three Rivers. The roll call of counties had not proceeded far before it became evident that Fuller would be an easy winner, and when it was completed, Dr. Seidmore himself moved that the rules be suspended and the secretary be instructed to cast the entire vote of the convention for his opponent, Dr. Seidmore's action was applauded.

Martindale Has No Fight.

Secretary of State Frederick C. Martindale, of Detroit, was easily re-nominated for a third term. In presenting his name to the convention, John D. MacKay, of Detroit, stated that Mr. Martindale is a man who has always placed the interests of his country, state and party above his own and who recently proved himself a graceful loser in the contest for the gubernatorial nomination at the primary election.

The name of State Senator Coleman C. Vaughan, of Clinton county, was forcefully presented by Attorney William Smith, of St. Johns. The only ballot resulted: Martindale, 1,043; Vaughan, 422.

There was no fight on the nomination for attorney general, it having been conceded before the delegates convened that Grant Fellows, of Hudson, would have a walk-away. When nominations were called for, Watts S. Humphrey, of Saginaw, rose and moved that the rules be suspended and the secretary be instructed to cast the entire vote of the convention for Mr. Fellows.

After adopting the state platform, as recommended by the committee on resolutions, the convention unanimously ratified the action of the Bay City convention by re-electing Alex J. Groesbeck, of Detroit, to the chairmanship of the state central committee.

Declines to Run on Prohibition Ticket.

W. J. Reynolds, a Laurium business man and meat dealer, nominated at the prohibition convention at Lansing for auditor-general on the state ticket, declines to become a candidate, claiming never to have been affiliated with the prohibition party in any form. Reynolds is a progressive and formerly was a republican.

The body of Watson Stranahan, of Monterey, was found hanging in his barn. He had been mentally unbalanced.

The Twelfth district Christian Endeavor convention of Michigan will be held in Standish, Oct. 4, 5 and 6. The Twelfth district takes in all the territory from Saginaw to the Straits. Over 100 delegates are expected. Among the speakers will be W. D. Howell, state field secretary; Rev. C. W. Hastings, Saginaw; Rev. Victor Brown, Bay City; Miss Kate Butterfield, Bay City, state organizer, and others.

SOLDIERS EXONERATED

Ball Allowed Two M. N. G. Men Charged With Slaying Ely at Jackson.

In their report to Gov. Osborn on the investigation of the shooting by Capt. F. L. Blackman and Private Howard Jackson of John Ely at Jackson two weeks ago, the military court of inquiry says:

"The court finds as a matter of law that Capt. Frank L. Blackman, Lieut. R. F. Smith, Privates Howard Jackson and Clare McArdle are not legally responsible for the death of John Ely and that their action in the matter of his death was due to their obedience to the order to aid in maintaining order and protecting property at the prison; in other words that the homicide was justifiable."

The report is a voluminous one including all the testimony taken which is referred to in the findings of the facts and a law brief setting forth the authorities on which are based the opinions of the court.

NEWS OF MICHIGAN

Pontiac—Leo Dwyer, motor car worker, is looking for Professor Randolph, "psychic phenomenon," who left town with $200 of Dwyer's money. Dwyer saw an ad. telling him to bring $200 to the palmist and he would be told how to increase it to $400 in two days. The money was supposed to be contained in a little wallet he hung about his neck. When he returned to have the promise made good he found the professor had vanished. Opening the wallet it was found to contain two slips of paper. A John Doe warrant has been issued for the arrest of Randolph.

Pontiac.—Joseph Wolf, twenty years old, was arrested on a charge of stealing three diamond rings and two jewel cases, valued at $500, from Mrs. Jennie Buckley of Wesson street. Wolf has been employed as messenger at the Welch Motor Car company plant and was sent to the Buckley home on an errand. He declares he found no one at home when he rapped, and denies all knowledge of the theft. He said his home is in Detroit.

Mt. Clemens.—The good roads campaign in Macomb county, which has been taken up enthusiastically by the entire county, took another leap when five teams drawing split log drags were placed to work on the Gratiot road between Mt. Clemens and the county line. About thirty workmen were also busy. Drags were ordered for the North Branch road, according to County Road Commissioner William Rosso.

Marshall.—Mary Marshall chapter, D. A. R., placed a huge Boulder with a bronze tablet in the city park, which divides the old territorial road here, to designate the same. It was originally an Indian trail, and for years the road went no further than Marshall. Later it was extended to where Kalamazoo now is. This road started out of Detroit, and is now known as Michigan avenue.

Battle Creek.—William Gray, fifty years old, ended his life by hanging himself in his room in a local boarding house. He tied a narrow backskin cord around his neck and attached this to the bed post. He came to Battle Creek three years ago from Michigan City, Ind., where a wife and son reside. Dependency over ill-health is assigned as the cause for his act.

Pontiac.—The city "mashers" ordinance became a law when it was formally adopted by the city commission. It goes into effect in 30 days, after which time the police department will be instructed to get busy and stop the insulting remarks which are addressed to unescorted women on the streets at night.

Charlevoix.—Prof. H. S. Smalley, one of the instructors in the literary department of the University of Michigan, died of diabetes at his summer home here. Professor Smalley had been in poor health for some time, but his sudden death was unlooked for.

Flint.—Mrs. Helen Grestia, twenty-five years old, who gives her home as Grand Blanc, attempted suicide in a lodging house by swallowing three ounces of chloroform and turning on the gas. She was found unconscious and removed to the hospital, where it is said she will recover. She refuses to give any reason for her attempt. When she failed to appear the proprietor investigated and the odor of gas was discovered.

Monroe.—Assistant Attorney General S. D. Pepper of Lansing was in the city conferring with the authorities relative to the legal phases involved in the matter of fish dying recently by wholesale in consequence, it is alleged, of refuse being dumped into the River Raisin by the Continental Sugar company of Blissfield. Legal steps, if any, will be begun in Lenawee county.

Vassar.—Charles O. Spencer of Gifford and James Cline of Akron, pleaded guilty in the circuit court to violation of the local option law and were sentenced to fine and costs of $75 each and 30 days in jail, with the alternative of 20 days additional if fine and costs were not paid. Austin Hartell was tried for violation of the local option law and found not guilty.

Grand Rapids.—One hundred local wholesalers departed in a special train to make a four days' tour of the southern part of Michigan to secure new business which is now going to Detroit and Toledo merchants. A glee club and the city's best band will be the attractions for the towns along the route.

Muskegon.—Accidentally shot, Joe Kondon, a young Hungarian, lies at Hackley hospital with a bullet through his abdomen, while John Pepl, in whose hands the revolver was when it exploded, is held at the county jail. Kondon is in a serious condition. Pepl surrendered himself to the officers immediately after the shooting, which occurred at Muskegon Heights in a room of their boarding house. The two Hungarians were examining their revolvers when Pepl's gun exploded.

BACKACHE A SIGNAL OF DISTRESS

Pain in the back is the kidney's signal of distress. If this timely warning is ignored, there is grave danger of dropsy, gravel, uric poisoning, or Bright's disease. When you have reason to suspect your kidneys, use a special kidney medicine.

Doan's Kidney Pills relieve weak, aching, sore, and inflamed kidneys, cure backache, regulate the urine, and give relief in the following statement.

CONVINCING TESTIMONY
James E. Poyner, Thompson Ave., Rossville, Ill., says: "I was laid up with kidney trouble. The pain in my back was so bad that I couldn't move. The kidney secretions were in a terrible condition. An acquaintance advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills and I did so. They made me well and during the past four years I have had no further trouble. I got Doan's at any drug store, 50c a box. "No, but he said he was not going to write any more jokes about mothers-in-law, bald-headed men, women's hats, intoxicated husbands and family fights."

Wanted a Bite.
Oh, yes; it was raining—had been all day. But they didn't mind that so much; you see, they were fishermen. All the same, they were trudging home, with weary steps and very weary-looking faces.

Their baskets were empty, and to be candid, they were in a very bad temper.

As they entered the little village a large dog ran at one of the party. The dog had a ferocious look, and was barking furiously. But the fisherman did not take much alarm at the animal. He just kicked it away carelessly.

"Aren't you afraid he'll go for you?" inquired another of the party, somewhat anxiously.

"The one who had kicked at the dog looked at his companion in a sorrowful manner.

"I only wish he would!" he replied. "I'd chance almost anything to be able to go home and say I had a bite!"

The First Toast.
Wilson Mizner, the well-known vixen, explained, on a New York roof garden, the origin of the word "toast"—toasting a lady.

"You will remember," he began, "that in olden times it was the custom to serve punch with toasted—that is to say, roasted—apples floating in it. These apples were called the toast. The toast—remember that.

"Well, it happened at Bath one day that a celebrated beauty stood in the Cross Bath, surrounded by a throng of admirers, and one of these admirers, intoxicated with admiration, took a glass of the water in which the beauty stood, and holding it aloft, drank her health, draining the water to the last drop.

"Beau Nash, who stood near by, shouted: "I like not the punch, but I would I had the toast!"

HARD TO SEE.
Even When the Facts About Coffee are Plain.

It is curious how people will refuse to believe what one can clearly see. Tell the average man or woman that the slow but cumulative poisonous effect of caffeine—the alkaloid in tea and coffee—tends to weaken the heart, upset the nervous system and cause indigestion, and they may laugh at you if they don't know the facts.

Prove it by science or by practical demonstration in the recovery of coffee drinkers from the above conditions, and a large per cent of the human family will shrug their shoulders, take some drugs and—keep on drinking coffee or tea.

"Coffee never agreed with me nor with several members of our household," writes a lady. "It enervates, depresses and creates a feeling of languor and heaviness. It was only by leaving off coffee and using Postum that we discovered the cause and way out of these ills.

"The only reason, I am sure, why Postum is not used altogether to the exclusion of ordinary coffee is, many persons do not know and do not seem willing to learn the facts and how to prepare this nutritious beverage. There's only one way—according to directions—boil it fully 15 minutes. Then it is delicious." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. SYNOPSIS.

Enid Mattland, a frank, free and unspooled young Philadelphia girl, is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle, Robert Mattland. James Armstrong, Mattland's protege, falls in love with her. His persistent wooing thrills the girl, but she hesitates, and Armstrong goes east on business without a definite answer. Enid hears the story of a mining camp near Newbold, whose wife fell off a cliff and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being eaten by wolves while he went for help. Kirkby, the old guide who tells the story, gives Enid a package of letters which he says were found on the dead woman's body. She reads the letters and at Kirkby's request keeps them. While bathing in mountain stream Enid is attacked by a bear, which is mysteriously shot. A storm adds to the girl's terror. A sudden deluge transforms brook into raging torrent, which sweeps Enid into gorge, where she is rescued by a mountain hermit after a thrilling experience. Campers in great confusion upon discovering Enid's absence when the storm breaks. Mattland and Old Kirkby go in search of the girl. Enid discovers that her ankle is sprained and that she is unable to walk. Her mysterious rescuer carries her to his camp. Enid goes to sleep in the strange man's bunk, but naturally in that strange solitude the relations of the girl and her rescuer become unnatural and strained. The stranger tells of a wife he had who is dead, and says he has sworn to ever cherish her memory by living in solitude. He and Enid, however, confess their love for each other. She learns that he is the man who killed his wife in the mountains. Enid discovers the writer of the letters to Newbold's wife to have been James Armstrong. Newbold decides to start to the settlement for help. The man is racked by the belief that he is unfaithful to his wife's memory, and Enid is tempted to tell him of the letters in her possession. Armstrong, accompanied by Kirkby and Robert Mattland, find a note that Newbold had left in the deserted cabin, and know that the girl is in his keeping. Fate brings all the actors together. Newbold returns from hunting game and sees a man near the hut. It is James Armstrong, who has at last located the missing girl, and he enters the cabin.

CHAPTER XXII.

The Odds Against Him.

The noise of the opening of the door and the rush of cold air that followed awoke Enid Mattland to instant action. She rose to her feet and faced the entrance through which she expected Newbold to reappear—for of course the newcomer must be he—and for the life of her she could not help that radiating flash of joy, the anticipatory anticipation of which fairly suffused her being; although if she had time to reflect she would have noted that not in the least had her acquaintance had any room at any time for receiving

"Enid!" he cried.

Naturally he thought the look of expectant happiness he had surprised upon her face was for him and he accounted for its sudden disappearance by the shock of his unexpected, unannounced, abrupt, entrance.

The warm color had flushed her face, but as she stared at him her aspect rapidly changed. She grew paler. The happy light that had shone in her eyes faded away and as he approached her she shrank back.

"You!" she exclaimed almost in terror.

"Yes," he answered smilingly, "I have found you at last. Thank God you are safe and well. Oh, if you could only know the agonies I have gone through. I thought I loved you when I left you six weeks ago, but now—"

In eager impetuosity he drew nearer to her. Another moment and he would have taken her in his arms, but she would have none of him.

"Stop," she said with a cold and inflexible sternness that gave pause even to his buoyant joyful assurance.

"Why, what's the matter?"

"The matter? Everything, but—"

"No evasions, please," continued the man still cheerfully but with a growing misgiving. His suspicions, in abeyance for the moment because of his joy at seeing her alive and well, arose with renewed force. "I left you practically pledged to me," he resumed.

"Not so fast," answered Enid Mattland, determined to combat the slightest attempt to establish a binding claim upon her.

"Isn't it true?" asked Armstrong.

"Here, wait," he said before she could answer, "I am half frozen, I have been searching for you since early morning in the storm." He unbuttoned and unbelted his huge fur coat as he spoke and threw it carelessly on the floor by the Winchester leaning against the wall. "Now," he resumed, "I can talk better."

"You must have something to eat then," said the girl.

She was glad of the interruption since she was playing for time. She did not quite know how the interview would end, he had come upon her so unexpectedly and she had never formulated what she would say to him, that which she felt she must say. She must have time to think, to collect herself, which he in his part was quite willing to give her, for he was not much better prepared for the interview than she. He really was hungry and tired, his early journey had been foolhardy and in the highest degree dangerous. The violence of his admiration for her added to the excitement of her presence, and the probable nearness of Newbold as to whose whereabouts he wondered were not conducive to rapid recuperation. It would be comfort to him also to have food and time.

"Sit down," she said. "I shall be back in a moment."

The fire of the morning was still burning in the stove in the kitchen; to heat a can of soup, to make him some buttered toast and hot coffee, were the tasks of a few moments; she brought them back to him, set them on the table before him and bade him fall to.

"By jove," exclaimed the man after a little time as he began to eat hastily but with great relish what she had prepared, while she stood over him watching him silently. "This is cozy. A warm, comfortable room, something to eat served by the finest woman in the world, the prettiest girl on earth to look at—what more could a man desire? This is the way it's going to be always in the future."

"You have no warrant whatever for saying or hoping that," answered the girl slowly but decisively.

"Have I not?" asked the man quickly. "Did you not say to me a little while ago that you liked me better than any man you had ever met and that I might win you if I could? Well, I can, and what's more, I will in spite of yourself, Enid,"—he laughed. "Why, the memory of that kiss I stole from you makes me mad." He pushed the things before him and rose to his feet once more. "Come, give me another," he said, "it isn't in the power of woman to stand against a love like mine."

"Isn't it?"

"No, indeed."

"Louise Newbold did," she answered very quietly but with the swiftness and the dexterity of a sword thrust by a master hand, a mighty arm.

Armstrong stared at her in open mouthed astonishment.

"What do you know about Louise Rosser or Newbold?" he asked at last.

"All that I want to know."

"And did that damned hound tell you?"

"If you mean Mr. Newbold, he never mentioned your name, he does not know you exist."

"Where is he now?" thundered the man.

"Have no fear," answered the woman calmly, "he has gone to the settlements to tell them I am safe and to seek help to get me out of the mountains."

"Fear!" exclaimed Armstrong, proudly, "I fear nothing on earth. For years, ever since I heard his name in fact, I have longed to meet him. I want to know who told you about that woman—Kirkby?"

"He never mentioned your name in connection with her."

"But you must have heard it somewhere," cried the man thoroughly bewildered. "The birds of the air didn't tell it to you, did they?"

"She told me herself," answered Enid Mattland.

"Who told you? Why, she's been in your grave five years, shot by a murderous dog of a bus-only resources were his strength, not of mind but of body. He made another most damaging mistake at this juncture.

"We are alone here, and I am master, remember," he said meaningly. "Come, let's make up. Give me a kiss for my pains and—"

"I have been alone here for a month with another man," answered Enid Mattland who was strangely unafraid in spite of this threat. "A gentleman, he has never so much as offered to touch my hand without my permission; the contrast is quite to your disadvantage."

"Are you jealous of Louise Rosser?" asked Armstrong suddenly seeing that he was losing ground and casting about desperately to account for it, and to recover what was escaping him.

"Why, that was nothing, a mere boy and girl affair," he ran on with a specious good humor as if it were all a trifle. "The woman was, I hate to say it, just crazy in love with me, but I really never cared anything especially for her; it was just a harmless sort of flirtation anyway. She afterward married this man Newbold and that's all there was about it."

The truth would not serve him and in his desperation and desire he staked everything on this astounding lie. The woman he loved looked at him with her face as rigid as a mask.

"You won't hold that against me, will you?" pleaded the man. "I told you that I'd been a man among men, yes, among women, too, here in this rough country, and that I wasn't worthy of you; there are lots of things in my past that I ought to be ashamed of and I am, and the more I see you the more ashamed I grow, but as for loving any one else, all that I've ever thought or felt or experienced before now is just nothing."

And this indeed was true, and even Enid Mattland with all her prejudice could realize and understand it. Out of the same mouth, was said of old, proceeded blessing and cursing, and from these same lips came truth and falsehood; but the power of the truth to influence this woman was as nothing to the power of falsehood. She could never have loved him, she now knew; a nobler being claimed her heart; but if he had told the truth regarding his relationship to Newbold's wife and then had completed it with his passionate avowal of his present love for her, she would have at least admired him and respected him.

"You have not told me the truth," she answered directly; "you have deliberately been false."

"Can't you see?" protested the man drawing nearer to her, "how much I love you?"

"Oh, that; yes I suppose that is true; as far as you can love any one I will admit that you do love me."

"So far as I can love any one?" he repeated after her. "Give me a chance and I'll show you."

"But you haven't told the truth about Mrs. Newbold. You have calumniated the dead, you have sought to shelter yourself by throwing the burden of a guilty passion upon the weaker vessel; it isn't manlike, it isn't—"

Armstrong was a bold fighter, quick and prompt in his decisions. He made another effort to set himself right. He took his ally another throw of the dice which he began to feel were loaded against him.

"I'm admitted, woman," he said, "how much the woman doesn't know, it was damned of it, but I know that I ing against desperate odds, he had no knowledge of how much she knew, or where she had learned anything. Every one about the mining camp where she had lived had known of his love for Louise Rosser, but he had not supposed there was a single human soul who had been privy to its later developments, and he could not figure out any way by which Enid Mattland could have learned by any possibility any more of the story than he had told her. He had calculated swiftly and with the utmost nicety, just how much he should confess. He was a keen witted clever man and he was fighting for what he held most dear, but his eagerness and zeal, as they have often done, overrode his judgment, and he made another mistake at this juncture. His evil genius was at his elbow.

"You must remember," he continued, "that you have been alone here in these mountains with a man for over a month; the world—"

"What, what do you mean?" exclaimed the girl, who indeed knew very well what he meant, but who would not admit the possibility.

"It's not every man," he added, blindly rushing to his doom, "that would care for you or want you—after that."

He received a sudden and terrible enlightenment.

"You coward," she cried, with upraised hand, whether in protest or to strike him neither ever knew, for at that moment the door opened the second time that morning to admit another man.

CHAPTER XXII.

The Last Resort of Kings and Men.

The sudden entrant upon a quarrel between others is invariably at a disadvantage. Usually he is unaware of the cause of difference and generally he has no idea of the stage of development of the affair that has been reached. Newbold suffered from this lack of knowledge and to these disadvantages were added others. For instance, he had not the faintest idea as to who or what was the stranger. The room was not very light in the day time. Armstrong happened to be standing with his back to it at some distance from the window by the side of which Enid stood. Six years naturally and inevitably makes some difference in a man's appearance, and it is not to be wondered that at first Newbold did not recognize the man before him as the original of the face in his wife's locket, although he had studied that face over and over again. A nearer scrutiny, a longer study, would have enlightened him of course, but for the present he saw nothing but a stranger visibly perturbed on one side and the woman he loved apparently fiercely resentful, stormily indignant, confronting the other with an upraised hand.

The man, whoever he was, had affronted her, had aroused her indignation, perhaps had insulted her, that was plain. He went swiftly to her side, he interposed himself between her and the man.

"Enid," he asked, and his easy use of the name was a revelation and an illumination to Armstrong, "who is this man, what has he done?"

It was Armstrong who replied. If Newbold were in the dark, not so he; although they had never spoken, he had seen Newbold. He recognized him instantly, indeed, recognized or not, the newcomer could be no other man in the mountains. He had extorted him. There was doubtless no other to find him when he approached the hut and was ready for him.

To the fire of his ancient hatred and jealousy was added a new fuel that increased its heat and flame. This man had come between Armstrong and the woman he loved before and had got away unscathed; evidently he had come between him and this new woman he loved. Well, he should be made to suffer for it this time and by Armstrong's own hands. The instant Newbold had entered the room Armstrong had thirsted to leap upon him, and he meant to do it. One or the other of them, he swore in his heart, should never leave that room alive.

But Newbold should have his chance. Armstrong was as brave, as fearless, as intrepid, as any man on earth. There was much that was admirable in his character; he would not take any man at a disadvantage in an encounter such as he proposed. He would not hesitate to rob a man of his wife if he could, and he would not shrink from any deceit necessary to gain his purpose with a woman, for good or evil, but he had his own ideas of honor, he would not shoot an enemy in the back for instance.

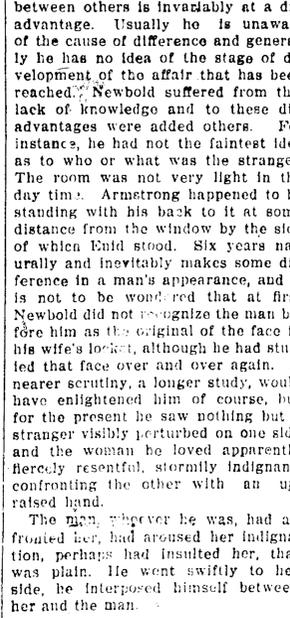

Singular perversion, this, to which some minds are liable! To take from a man his wife by subtle and underhand methods, to rob him of that which makes life dear and sweet—there was nothing dishonorable in that! But to take his life, a thing of infinitely less moment, by the same process—that was not to be thought of. In Armstrong's code it was right, it was imperative, to confront a man with the truth and take the consequences; but to confront a woman with a lie and take her body and soul, if so be she might be gained, was equally admirable. And there are other souls than Armstrong's in which this moral inconsistency and obliquity about men and women has lodgment!

Chance for One-Armed Man.

"I'm looking for a one-armed man," said the patron of a New York restaurant. "If you know of a man who has only a right hand I can make him a good business proposition—one that will save him a lot of good dollars and save me the same amount. His right hand, however, must be a No. 7 1/2."

"It's this way: Several months ago I sprained my ankle and for many months was obliged to lean heavily on a cane. To protect my left hand I wore a glove on that hand, but did not use one on the right. The result was that I wore out dozens of left gloves, but the right hand ones I never put on."

SMILING MARTYRDOM.

SYNOPSIS.

The scene at the opening of the story is laid in the library of an old, worn-out country plantation, known as the Barren Place. The scene is to be sold, and the story is that of the owner, the old judge, in the subject of discussion by the judge, Yancy and Mahaffy, who are known as 'Staden' and 'Bod'.

The judge, Yancy and Mahaffy, sprang from their chairs. Mr. Mahaffy was plainly shocked at the spectacle of Mr. Cavendish's lawless violence. Yancy was disturbed, too, but not by the moral aspects of the case; he was doubtful as to how his friend's would appeal to the judge. He had not been distressed on that point since the judge's one idea was to sell it. With his hands on his head, he was now bending above the

BABY IN MISERY WITH RASH

Monroe, Wis.—"When my baby was six weeks old there came a rash on his face which finally spread until it got nearly all over his body. It formed a crust on his head, hair fell out and the itch was terrible. When he would scratch the crust, the water would ooze out in big drops. On face and body it was in a dry form and would scale off. He was in great misery and at nights I would lie awake holding his hands so that he could not scratch and disfigure himself. I tried all the remedies at first, then got Cuticura, but it did no good. A friend suggested Cuticura so I sent for a sample to try. I would do, when to my surprise a few applications I saw improvement, and he was cured. I bought a box of Cuticura and had them half a box. His head is growing again and is no longer disfigured. MANAGEMENT OF SANDY SOILS

By J. A. JEFFERY, Professor of Soils Michigan Agricultural College.

After sandy land, such as is found in western and northern Michigan, has been brought under cultivation, great care must still be exercised in its management. The cropping value of these soils will depend more than anything else upon the incorporation and retention of organic matter. To this end: a careful rotation of crops should be adopted. It should be simple and short, something like this:

(1) Clover, one or two years, plowing under as much of the aftergrowth as is possible when preparing for the succeeding crop; (2) a cultivated crop—potatoes, corn or possibly beans, and (3) grain of some kind, seeding again to clover with grain.

This is not the only rotation that could be followed, but the important thing is to introduce clover into the rotation as frequently as possible. No grain or cultivated crop should be planted twice in succession.

The plowing should be shallow, probably never to exceed five inches, and this with a view to keeping the organic matter as near the surface as possible, where it will accomplish the most good, particularly in protecting the soils from the ravages of the winds. It is good practice not to use the plow too frequently. Many farmers use the plow only in breaking the clover sod. The disc harrow is used at all other times in preparing soil for crops.

When cultivated crops occupy the land, the cultivation should be frequent and shallow. Only those who have practiced persistent shallow cultivation can appreciate the importance of thus stirring the soil in preserving the moisture and insuring profitable crops.

Use "catch" crops where possible. If a regular crop has been removed fairly early in the fall and the succeeding crop is not to be planted the following spring, it is always worth while to seed the land to oats or rye or vetch. Frequently it will be found desirable and profitable just before the last cultivation of the corn to seed the corn field to winter vetch seed at the rate of 30 pounds per acre. The field may be seeded to oats or rye instead. The benefits to be derived from the catch crop are at least three:

- 1. In the fall and early spring soil is protected from the winds. 2. During the winter these crops catch and retain the snow upon the ground, from which fact the soil benefits not only from the blanket of snow during the winter, but, also, from the melting of the snow in place in the spring. 3. The disking in of the crop in the spring adds to the soil organic matter, and in the case of vetch, nitrogen as well.

Green Manuring.

Green manuring is the practice of growing a crop to plow under before it matures. This is done to increase the amount of organic matter in the soil. Different crops are used for this purpose.

Rye is perhaps the most commonly used, and probably chiefly because it can be planted in the fall and makes a considerable growth before the growing season closes. It takes up the growing again early in spring and continues until the farmer is ready to plow it under. It is sown at the rate of one and one-half bushels to two bushels per acre.

Of the spring grown crops oats or rye are frequently used, and are sown at the regular rates of seeding.

Sometimes Indian corn is sown at the rate of one bushel to one and one-half bushels per acre for this purpose. It may be sown in drills or broadcast.

Peas and beans are sometimes used, sown at the rate of one bushel of oats to two bushels of peas to the acre. Sand vetch is also used, the seeding being at the rate of 30 to 50 pounds per acre. The seeding in all cases is done as early as conditions of soil and air are suitable for the planting of the crop.

The sand, hairy or winter vetch seems to be rapidly growing in favor, both as a catch crop plant and as a green manuring plant. Its value rests upon three things, viz:

- 1. Because of the size of the seed it may be planted as deep as two inches, thus increasing its chances for moisture supply, and thus insuring germination. The clovers and alfalfa frequently suffer because they may not be planted deep enough to insure moisture and anchorage to preserve the plant from blowing away. 2. The plant makes a very rapid and vigorous growth, producing a large amount of material to plow under or disc in. 3. It is much more valuable than the grains for this purpose because of the amount of nitrogen which it gathers during its growth and leaves for the use of future crops.

On the Miami sandy soils of southern Michigan the cow pea is being much used as a green manuring crop. Peas are sown at the rate of 3 pecks per acre, about the first week in June, and the crop is plowed under from the first to the middle of September. When wheat is sown after cow peas thus plowed under, the yields of wheat are greatly increased; and when clover is seeded with the wheat the following spring, it seldom fails to make an excellent catch.

A seed test in time saves any number of bushels.

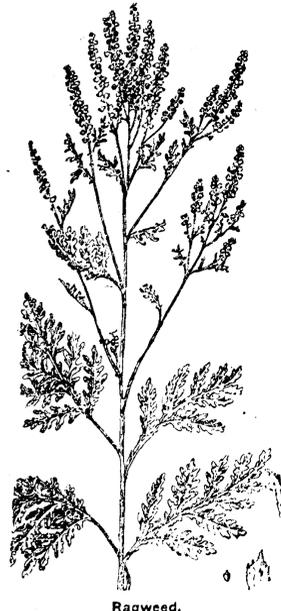

WEED CONTROL IN AUTUMN

By R. J. BALDWIN, Michigan Agricultural College.

After the crop is removed, from new seedings and stubble lands, the weeds which have been kept in check by the growing crop are apt to spring up and make a sufficient growth to produce a crop of seed and crowd the thin seedlings of grass and clover. The number and variety of such weeds will depend upon the locality and the care exercised in the operation of the farm. Ragweed, pigweed, foxtails and Canada thistles are among the most common kinds found. Such weeds can be prevented from seeding to a great extent, by clipping with the cutter bar of the mower tilted high so as to leave the new seedlings. It is objectionable to attempt to control weeds or new seedlings with sheep for the reason that sheep are almost sure to eat the tender seedlings and leave the coarser weeds.

The practice of clipping with a mower has been used by the Michigan Agricultural college farm, where a constant warfare must be kept up against weeds which are continually being introduced in the purchase of hay, straw and grain for feeding.

Perhaps the most persistent fall weed and the one that is most conspicuous during August and September along roadsides, ditches and grain fields, is the ragweed (shown in illustration). Its ragged, rank growth and long lived seeds makes it an especially bad weed. Its tall green tassel which contains such an abundance of yellow pollen is said to be the cause of hay fever. Careful farming with clean cultivation crops, such as beans and corn, is the most effective system of holding this weed in check.

Care of Stallions.

A stallion shut up in a dark stall without the companionship of other horses often becomes moody and savage. Some English stallions ride a pony while leading their horses for exercise, and the horses become so attached to these ponies that they become fretful and uneasy when they are not near.

At night the ponies are given a stall next to the horses. Of course, some horses are too savage in nature to permit their being led in company with a pony, but if broken to this treatment when young, stallions can be handled in this way.

Fall Sown Clover.

Even last year there was good success with fall-sown clover and the season was none too favorable. There are a great many enemies to spring-sown clover, weeds, grasses and too thick stands of grain, which fall seeding escapes.

When a spring seeding has been scorched out after removal of the grain crop, the land should at once be disked and reseeded the clover on a fine seed bed with a firm subsoil. Even if it is very dry the chances are there will come enough fall rain for the clover.

It is a usual practice in the spring to have what is called a "cleaning-up day." There are some things, however, which ought to be cleaned up in the fall, such as weeds which have been missed and are waiting to scatter their seeds far and wide on the snow in winter, and limbs in the orchards which will invite rabbits to live there and nibble the fresh bark of young trees.

The amount of money invested in farm machinery on the average Michigan farm is nearly as great as the money invested in a barn. The barn is always insured against fire, but the machinery is never insured against rust unless a good shed has been made for it. Some machines ought never to be rained on and if the shed is handy they can be run in instead of being left in the field at night.

Some protection should be placed around young trees in the fall to prevent girdling by mice and rabbits during winter. Wire screen, tar paper, etc., are used for this purpose and often save whole orchards even where these pests were not thought to be numerous.

EXHAUSTION OF THE SOIL.

Prof. E. H. Farrington of Wisconsin Agricultural College, in speaking of Soil Exhaustion, made a very interesting statement regarding the selling of dairy products from the farm as compared with selling the grain productions directly off the farm. Here is what he says:

"There is a great difference in the amount of soil fertility removed from the farm by selling crops as compared with the selling of cream and butter. The constituents of the soil that become most easily exhausted by farming operations are the nitrogen, the phosphoric acid and the potash. These each have a market value per pound and can be bought in commercial fertilizers. They are also contained in farm manure.

"An analysis of different crops and of milk, butter and cheese will show how much of these various constituents are removed from the farm when a certain quantity of these products are sold. For instance, by using the same prices per pound for the following crops, etc., we find that the fertilizing constituents taken from the soil when one ton of hay is sold from the farm have a value of $4.34, one ton of corn $5.36, one ton of wheat $6.63, one ton of milk $2.17, one ton of skim-milk $2.31, one ton of butter 49 cents, one ton of whey 84 cents, and one ton of cheese $14.19. The value of each ton of these different products is well known. For instance, the ton of hay may be sold for $20.00, while the ton of butter is worth $600.00 and a ton of cheese $200.00. These figures show, however, that if the crops raised on the farm are fed to the cows and either cream or butter only is sold, then for every $600.00 worth of butter only 50 cents worth of fertility is drawn from the farm."

In encouraging the farmers to engage in dairying, Prof. Farrington says:

"Dairying keeps up the fertility of the soil as already explained.

"Skim-milk is very valuable to the farmer not only for the reasons given, but because it is profitable for a farmer to become a stock raiser—that is, raise calves, pigs, poultry, etc., rather than a crop producer and a seller of grain.

"Dairy products, butter and cheese, are not bulky to market, being much more concentrated and the cost of transportation less than it is for hay, grain, etc.

"Dairying utilizes waste land, such as stony pastures, timber and swamp land, which may be used for pasturing the cows if these are kept, but which otherwise would give no returns.

"Dairying gives profitable employment during the entire year and idleness is not good for either man or beast."

A visit to the National Dairy Show at Chicago, October 24th to November 2nd next, will give every one a short course in dairying that cannot be equalled anywhere in the world, and all such matters as here discussed by Prof. Farrington will be illustrated by the world's experts in every branch of the dairy industry. Opportunities to view the best representatives on American soil of the leading dairy cattle, and meet the men who are devoting their lives to the advancement of the dairy industry is here afforded.

Everything will be shown in a big, broad, educational way that all may be enabled to keep abreast of the most modern methods in appliances and the best results in breeding and feeding dairy cattle, and preparing for market and the marketing of all dairy products. Adv.

Nothing More to Live For.

Without question, the Scots curler of whom Lord Lyveden tells in Fry's Magazine placed the proper value on his sport.

During a recent curling-match in Switzerland, the skip of one of the teams, who happened to be a Scotsman, was so delighted with the accurate shot of one of his team, that he was heard to address him in the following manner: "Lie down and die, man; lie down and die. Ye'll never lay a finer stone nor that if ye live to be a hundred."

Potteries Prospering.

The output of the pottery industry of the United States had a value of $34,518,560 in 1911, according to the United States geological survey chart of clay products production, by states, compiled by Jefferson Middletown. The pottery collection for 1911 was greater than for 1910, when the output was valued at $32,781,678, the increase being $1,736,882. Of the total production, Ohio was first, with an output valued at $14,775,265; New Jersey second, with $2,880,292; West Virginia third, with $2,178,354; Pennsylvania fifth, with $2,156,817, and Indiana sixth, with $1,604,737. The output of no other state had a value in excess of a million dollars.

Milk-crust all over tiny baby's face

Mothers, if your little ones are suffering from tormenting, unsightly skin or scalp eruptions, how can you fail to profit by the experience of this mother, who writes: "I do not know what caused the milk-crust on my baby's face, all over it except the eyeballs. It started as a rash, of an itching nature; though only three weeks old it tried to scratch it. Then in about a week or ten days it had formed into crust that was very sore, whitish, and came off in scales. For about five weeks I used different washes, but it did no good. From the first application of the Resinol Soap and Ointment, in a few hours, seemingly, we could see the change. I can safely say I cured the baby with Resinol Soap and Ointment. Anyone who will try them will surely get results that are lasting." (Signed) Mrs. Lavetta R. Rubin, Cauthorville, Va., May 19, 1912.

James E. Hoff

James E. Hoff was born in Superior township, Washtenaw Co., December 22, 1846 and died at his home at Anderson in Livingston county, September 28, 1912, aged 65 years, 8 months, and 6 days.

At the age of nine years he moved with his parents to this county and settled on the homestead where he has always resided with the exception of two years.

On December 19, 1878 he was united in marriage to Alice Bowen of Handy and to them were born six children, all of whom are now living and with their mother are left to mourn their loss.

He is also survived by one brother and three sisters, one sister and one brother having preceded him to the better land.

He was a man of sterling character, a loving husband and a kind father; he has gone to the reward that awaits those who are not weary in well doing.

The funeral services were conducted at the home, October 1 at 10:30 a. m., Rev. G. E. McTaggart of this place officiating.
